

Quantum Windows Continued Product Improvement

Non-Locking Handles Product Replacement

As part of our ongoing commitment to product development and continuous improvement, we have reviewed the range of non-locking casement window handles currently supplied and identified an opportunity to enhance both the product and the choice available to our customers.

Following this review, we have made the decision to move away from the dedicated non-locking casement handle and, going forward, will supply our standard locking casement handle with a black pip packed separately to be fitted within the keyhole.

This change provides a number of benefits. Most notably, it enables us to offer all available handle colour variants in both locking and non-locking configurations, providing greater flexibility and ensuring a more consistent appearance across our product range.

The new handle will perform and function in the same way as the current non-locking option, while offering the added benefit of a significantly wider colour selection.

The photograph below shows the handle that will be supplied on future orders. This change will be implemented once our existing stock of the current dedicated non-locking handle has been exhausted.

We believe this represents a positive improvement to our product offering and will provide our customers with greater choice and consistency when specifying casement windows.
